

1 or the code approach?

2 MR. MELVIN: The code approach doesn't require 3 any structural changes, as I understand it.

4 MR. MILES: That is my understanding. It is 5 purely permissive.

6 MR. MELVIN: Yes, your county, for example, if 7 it adopted code home rule, wouldn't necessarily require 8 that the County Commissioners' structure be changed, would 9 it, Dr. Loevy?

10 DR. LOEVY: No. Under the code provision, as 11 I understand it, the County Commissioners could decide
12 their form of code home rule would be three County Commis-
13 sioners; and then if the voters approved that at a refer-14 endum, automatically then would devolve on them all the 15 express powers the State Legislature enacts if the code
16 provision of the constitution is adopted, which means code
17 counties -- as the constitution now reads, the Legislature 18 could classify the code counties, but if they did what they 19 did with the municipalities and have just one class, that 20 means code counties will, in effect, become a classification
21 opposed to and different from home rule counties as a
