

1 Court the power to deprive it of jurisdiction and cut
2 its jurisdiction. too, substantially would be unconstitu-
3 tional. I am not sure of the other way.

4 MRS. BOTHE: I think the fact that influences
5 the Committee is the fact we got along for a hundred 6 years without such a provision, just the provision that 7 it has the jurisdiction provided by law, period.

8 MR. MARTINEAU: The difficulty with the other
9 aspect of it is, if you provide that they have the right
10 to draft into the Legislature to have appellate juris-11 diction in all cases, then there is no way of limiting 12 anyone from not having a right to go all the way from 13 People's Court right up to the Supreme Court, no matter
14 what type of case it is and no matter what justifiable
15 reason there may be for cutting off the appeal at any 16 particular point.

17 MR. SYKES: I think the draft should make clear
18 you could cut the right of appeal, some rights of appeal
19 off, but that the Court of Appeals should have appellate 20 jurisdiction.

21 MR. ENEY: That would mean, then, that the
