

2. Provide for authority at both local and State level for the appropriate Executive powers that would enable more meaningful decisions to be reached for the provision of health care and services to the people;

3. Return to State officials the authority for determining the allocation of federal funds where they are needed and in a manner that will be in the best interests of the people in each state;

4. Provide for simplified and efficient systems of organization that will involve a minimum of bureaucratic oversight, interference and "red-tape";

5. Enable the Governor of each state and local level governmental officials more input, authority and jurisdiction over such agencies; and

6. Any other amendments that will be beneficial to the efficient, orderly operation of this governmentally controlled system of health planning and development; and be it further

No. 11

(Senate Joint Resolution No. 35)

A Senate Joint Resolution concerning

School Health Services

FOR the purpose of requesting that the State Board of Education study and report on the provision of emergency first-aid services to all public school students.

There exists a reasonable expectation that emergency first-aid is being provided in all public schools by trained personnel. Many secondary schools do provide first-aid services. Testimony before the Maryland General Assembly, however, indicates that elementary schools in some areas of Maryland do not provide this service. This lack of adequate emergency first-aid coverage to young children must be rectified; now,
