

Annapolis Fascinating Place For O'Connor Children: Tot. 3. Takes Over The Mansion

By Barbara Lovell

Although four of the five children of Governor and Mrs. Herbert R. O'Connor go to school in Baltimore, all of them seem to regard Annapolis as their real home.

For them the only unpleasant angle about living here is that Herbert, Jr., 16; Eugene, 14 and James, 10, have to get up so early in the morning in order to drive to school. Two attend Loyola and one Mt. Washington.

However nothing bothers Robert, who is almost three. He toddles around the spacious, beautifully furnished rooms of the Government House, perfectly content with his lot. When asked if he'd like to spend the day "home" in Baltimore, he promptly refuses with "No, No, Bobby's home now." Patricia, who is 13, boards at school in Baltimore, coming home often for week-ends.

Mrs. O'Connor believes that the children will like Annapolis even more in the summer when they will have more time to enjoy it. All of them are greatly impressed with the Naval Academy.

The Governor has always liked Annapolis, Mrs. O'Connor said. No less busy than her husband, Mrs. O'Connor attends many functions in Annapolis, Baltimore and Washington. Often she makes two trips to Baltimore in one day. Describing herself as having a great deal of "nervous energy," Mrs. O'Connor said she, too, is thoroughly enjoying her life in Government House.
