IARTLAN and GAZETTE,

Containing the freshest Advices foreign and domestic.

THURSDAY, January 1, 1756

DUBLIN, Officer 7.

HIS Day the Right Honourable the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, Recorder, Sheriffs, and Commons of the City of Dublin, waited upon his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, with the following Address to his Majesty, upon his fafe Return to his British Dominions.

Most gracious Sovereign,

m 2

ngs

oal,

ter's 4

Timo

pay eriff

ber,

d is coff

urd; may Pif-efh-

old

ng

rks, 4

E pleased to accept from Us, Your most dutiful Subjects, a faint Expression of those Sentiments which Loyalty and Grattude inspire on your safe Return to Great-Britain. Welcome, Royal Sir, to those Dominions where You Reign in the Hearts of Your People: Welcome to that People whose Happiness is in a great Measure derived from Your cely Care.

We cannot sufficiently admire Your Majesty's unwearied Endeavours for the effectual Support of unwearied Endeavours for the effectual Support of the Honour of Your Crown, and the Protection of all Your Subjects; nor can we sufficiently revere that tender and diffusive Regard to Your People, which will not suffer the Rights of the remotest American in Your Colonies, to be invaded with Impunity. No Monarch can be more anxious to continue to His Subjects the Blessings of Peace, none more ready to encounter all the Dangers of War, when Peace cannot otherwise be secured to War, when Peace cannot otherwise be secured to

From You, Great Sir, Kings may learn to make their Subjects Happy; and from Us, those Subjects may be taught to know, that their Lives and Fortunes ought at all Times to be devoted to the Interest and Honour of such a Prince. In Testimony whereof, We have caused the Common Seal of the said City to be hereunto affixed this third Day of October, in the Year of our Lord One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-Five.

$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$$

" PRAISE of COWARDICE.

PHILOSOPHERS (fays this Writer, who figns himfelf Phobos) give us five Causes of Courage, Example, Custom, the Fumes of Wine, Ignorance or Want of Foresight, and the Agitation of the irascible Quality of the Soul. If this be the Case, I see not why the Brave Man should look with Contempt on the Pusillanimous. Practlara Virtus, quam etiam Ebrietas indust! [Even Courage inspir'd by the Bottle is commendable!]

nimous. Præclara Virtus, quam etiam Ebrietas inducit! [Even Courage infir'd by the Bottle is commendable!]

"Courage, which is the Refult of Reason and a good Conscience, and has nothing of Shame, Ambition, Example or Anger, in its Groundwork, I believe is hardly to be found in this Age, or ever known in the preceding ones; if not in Virgil's Hero: Wherefore I look upon true Bravery to be a Chimera; or Phantom: For a Proof, 'tis common among us to compare a brave Man to a Lion, and among the French to his Sword: And Homer compares his Heroes, Ajax and Menelaus, to an Ass and a Fly.

"If a Man is naturally void of Fear, 'tis no Virtue in him; if he fears, he is conscious of Cowardice; however a greater Féar, that of being dishonour'd, may make him stifle it."

"Philosophers divide Courage into active and passive, and prefer the latter: Whence he, whom the World esteems an unrelenting Coward, is the bravest Man; and if we consult Reason, he who prefers the being quiet with a Kick on the Breech, to the being run through the Lungs, is the wisest Man. Besides, passive Courage is the Mother of active; for Despair has produc'd almost incredible Actions;

"Una salus vistis nullam sperare salutem."

"The Sasety of the Vanous de late to the see for more!"

"Una salus victis nullam sperare salutem.
["The Sasety of the Vanquish'd is to hope for none.]

"Aristotle calls your brave Fellows, who seem to sear nothing, not even the Artillery of the Skies, down-right Fools.

"A Pelander had the Fool-hardiness to go up to and take the Prey from a hungry Lion: He was one of the Guard of Matthias Corvin: This Prince made him a Present, but immediately banish'd him, not thinking it safe to have such a desperate Block-head near him.

"Fear is implanted in our Natures, and the banish'd him, not thinking it safe to have such a desperate Block-head near him.

"Fear is implanted in our Natures, and the Bravest are subject to it." There was not a gallanter General than Aratus, mention'd by Plutarch; yet he never enter'd upon Action without Palpitation of Heart, and great Reluctance. Gracias V. King of Navarre, call'd the Trembler, whose Bravery was well known, was seiz'd with a violent Tremor whenever he was going to give Battle, and said once to his 'Squire, who was arming him, and endeavouring to animate him; Poor Man, you know but little of me. Could my Flesh be sensible of the Dangers to which my Courage will this Day expose me, I should be worse of then with a quaking Fit. I can't indeed allow true Bravery, as describ'd above, to either him, or Alexander, or Casar, or any of the celebrated Heroes, because 'twas not pure and unmix'd." Fear is also implanted in the most Courageous among Brutes. The Lion is terrify'd at the Crowing of a Cock; and Seneca says, Leoni patrida sunt ad levissimos Strepitus Pedera. [The Least Noise intimidates the Lion.] The Grunting of a Hog frightens an Elephant. The Tiger is said drives away the Wolf; and so does the Noise of a Bell ty'd round the Neck of any Beast.

"The Ancients were so far from thinking Fear

" The Ancients were so far from thinking Fear

"The Ancients were so far from thinking Fear reproachful, that we find, in the Heathen Theology, their Gods thoroughly posses'd with it: And Homer has not only shewn Paris, but Ajax and Helor, trusting to their Feet for Sasety. "Charle quint reading on the Tomb of Martidus Barbuda, that he was an entire Stranger to Fear, merrily said, I'll warrant this brave Fellow newer snuff'd a Candle with his Fingers; hinting 'tis possible he would have fear'd burning them. "The following Lines shew that Fear is sometimes advantageous:

"The following Lines shew that Fear is iometimes advantageous:
"He who rum away,
"May live to fight another Day. Hudibras.
"But besides, I have sound Fear to be medicinal; it will cure the Hickup, the Gout, and a constiguted Belly. King James the I. was in great Danger from this Disorder; and when nothing he took would operate, a Philosopher order'd a Pistol to be sir'd in his Chamber, which did the Business, and sav'd the King's Life, at the small Expence of new Linings to this Breeches."

$

P-A R I S, Odober 1.

Report prevails, that Hostilities are again commenced in the East-Indies between the English and us, which are carried on with Success on our Part. This Advice is said to be received very lately, and it appears to have gained as yet so little Credit as not to Influence or Affect the Company's Actions, which continue on the gradual Decrease.

We are affured that Teven Men of War comletely armed and rigged, are foon expected from Sweden.

Bruffeli, OHober 3. According to our last Advices from Dunkirk, the Works carrying on there were almost compleated; the last Battery was to be finished this Week. The Engineers have been very busy in Measuring and Sounding the Harbour; and it was said that 800 Pioneers were expected there, in order, as it was thought, to be employed in cleaning it directly.

According to our Advices from the Frontiers, 'tis computed there are about 50,000 Troops actually assembled in French Flanders and the Neighbouring Provinces; and we hear a large Body of Infantry has defiled towards the Coasts of Britanny.

of Britanny.

Paris, Odober 3. They write from Nantz, that the Opiniatre, belonging to the Count Dubois de la Mothe's Squadron, which has got into Brest, being on the 21st of last Month within 20 Leagues of that Port, was attacked by two English Frigates, one of which was very roughly handled, and obliged to sheer off; and the Opiniatre would certainly have taken the other, had she not descried two or three other English Ships making Sail towards her. In this Fight, which lasted three Hours, our Ship had but two Men killed, and sive wounded. This Man of War is commanded by the Chevalier de Molien.

killed, and five wounded. This Man of War is commanded by the Chevalier de Molien.

Paris, Od. 6. Letters from Louisbourg, dated August 22, advise, that a Detachment of 500 English have been entirely cut to Pieces, not one escaping, near St. John's River, by a Party of Indians and French from Canada; and that they were informed by two Pilots belonging to the Alcide, who made their Escape from Halisax, that an epidemical Distemper hath cut off 4000 Men, as well English, as French Prisoners, at Halisax, into which Port two Vessels from France, and three from the West-Indies, laden with Syrrup, have been carried. When these Letters came away eight English Men of War were cruizing off Cape-Breton.

three from the West-Indies, laden with Syrrup, have been carried. When these Letters came away eight English Men of War were cruizing off Cape-Breton.

LONDON, October 5.

Extract of a Letter from Cork, September 21.

"Yesterday arrived in this Harbour the Martha, Capt. Hartfield; she lest the River of Nantz the 13th Instant, and, by a Gentleman who came Passenger in the said Ship, we received the following Account, which may be depended on: That at Seven o'Clock in the Morning of the 21st Current, being moderate but hazy Weather, and about ten Leagues from Usant, we saw to the Letward twis Men of War, which, when we were about four Miler distant from them, we perceived one to be English, and the other French; their continual Firing drew our Attention at that Side, and, at the Weather cleared up a little, we easily distinguished the French Man of War, which seemed to be a Ship of about 70 or 80 Guns, making all the Sail she could E.S. E. answering the English Man of War (which seemed to be 30 Guns) with her Sternebasse Guns: The English Man of War continued string at her with Broad-sides, and bore Chace till we loss Sight of them, which was about Ten o'Clock the said Morning.

October 11. The French Ministry, says a Letter from Amsterdam, after having been vastly submissive for some Time, have begun all at once to talk in a high Strain. Notwithstanding the King's Moderation and his Love of Peace, his Majesty hath been sorced to take a Resolution to employ all the Means which Providence hath put into his Handsof revenging the Insults offered by the English to the French Flag. The Letters which furnish these Particulars, add, that after the Return of a Courier which hath been sent to the Viscount d'Aubeteire at Vienna; we shall speedily see the Effects of this Resolution of the French King, if the Answer he brings is not agrecable to his Majesty's Expectation.

The Captain of a French 80 Gun Ship, mentioned in a Letter from Ireland as having been seen seen running from a much smaller English Man of War, has actua

The Captain of a French 80 Gun Ship; mentioned in a Letter from Ireland as having been feen running from a much smaller English Man of War, has actually been broke. The English Ship was the Ambulcade, Capt. Rowley.—The French Court-marinal fet a good Example of Justice and Expedition in the Beginning of a War.

The Court Martial upon the two brave Commanders, who permitted the safe Return of the Brest Fleet, was expected to fit Yesterday. The Admiral had disposed his Fleet into such a Line, that