PROVIDENCE, Od. 25.

Istorday laft the following tragical affair hapmed at Scituate.—One Joseph Brigs, whole the, in consequence of his brutal behaviour surds her, had been separated from him about par, formed the horrid design of murdering a. With this view he went up to a house here his wise was visiting a relation, and in a way called at a neighbour's to sharpen a if; while at the house where his wise was, termed much agitated, and on her departure, this was about two in the afternoon, he folwed and overtook her at a little distance from the house where she had been, having another wan in company with her.—He demanded of wise where the would return and live with in, to which she repled in the affirmative, reided she could be well treated. This answer to proving satisfactory, he drew his knife, and and stabbed her in several parts of the def. The other woman immediately ran towell the house, and Briys, observing a young to approaching him, quieted his mangled wife, as shield which wounds he soon expired.—Mrs.
Set's life was at first despaired of, but it was and of which wounds he foon expired.—Mrs. Sy's life was at first despaired of, but it was stray said there was a possibility of her rewing. A jury of inquest, which sat on the sy of Brigs, brought in their verdict, sui-
