LONDON, Ollober 6. Two letters, one from the commissioners sent the camp at Chalons, and another from general De mourier, were read in the convention, stating, in the enemy continued to retreat, and that the road hind them was strewed with dead bodies. On villing, the camp, which they had quitted, 300 horses wer found dead and half eaten. These letters further state, that there were wo fick in the hospital-general at Grand Pre, and 5000# Verdun. General Dumourier was of opinion, was the enemy could neither winter at Verdun nor Longwy, and that they would effect their retreat though Luxemburg.
