Legisla in the Company of the Section Prince-state distinguished for the eiger of indirect and for his provident distinct, and for his provident of the interest of his constituents, mitted a bill to the House of Delega, in which he recites, that is able that a requisition would be defrom the h which he recites, that is in whall that a requisition would be defined the way department of United States for draughts from that, and therefore it is the duty is legislature to provide that the state and therefore it is the duty is legislature to provide that the state in th scaled into service, to proportion to the number of militia, and pre wifice of such apportionment to milits day, and he bilicontained the datait necessary to enforce this principle. The humane proposition to coerce hose, the most deeply interested in the preservation of property, from the grain of the enemy, to provide for its security, was supported by all the members of the House of Delegates, except by six democratio gentlemen

Messra Wolnwright, Tenant, Ben-net, Pachin, Bawles and Downey. The Senate of Maryland composed of the wealthiest men of the state, generally above the uge of forty fire, or holding commissions which exempted them from serving in the ranks, without any difficulty refused this bill. In its favour, not a voice was heard in the Senate; and although they solemnly invoked the national government to appeal to serns, and pledged their lives and their fortunes to co operate in its prosecution, yet they refused to submit their property to be taxed to hire men to fight for it defence, and availing themselves of exemptions from military duty, devolved on you the responsibility of repairing to eamp, in referce of their wealth, waile your families were beggared by your absence abroad Yet these men have to boast to you, they are the triends of the poor

The Senate, having descated this bill, a law eventually passed, that when called to militia duty, you might repair yourself, or by substitute, or that your officers might have one for you if you did not go or send, at your expense, and that you should not remain longer in service than sixty days.

During the summer session of 1813, the late Mr. Donaldson, who so gloriously fell while acting as adjutant to the twenty seventh regiment of Baltimore militia, attempted to repeal the provisions which I have mentioned, and to ons which I have mentioned, and to cloath the military with the power of bringing into the field the militia at the point of the bayones. The federalists prevented this attempt, and thus refused to yield you up to the whim, inso lence or cruelty, of every sengeant of the militia. The Senate however, pas sed a bill containing such a provision, which was negatived by the tederalists in the House of Dalegates. At the same season a law was pro sed, that the militia should be class and might serve by substitute, and he fined not exceeding fifty dollars for non attendance, unless prevented by sickness or a reasonable excusa-In $14, the milital back was again under revision, and the bill which the committee reported, provided that every militial man called into committee reported. ry militia man called into service, and notified thereof, shall be considered as in actual service and may be proceed ed against as in actual service, to enforce his attendance.

A motion was made and prevailed, to strike out this strong power to be exercised by the military, and in opposition to which every democrat voted, to wit: "T. B. Dorsey, Randall, Warner Stansbury, Harryman, Duvall, Emory, Burgess, Wright, Stephens, Forwood of Jacob, Dallam, Bradford, Barney. Kell, Tilghnian, Schnebly, Gabby and Mason.

Defeated by the federalists in retaining this provision, Mr. T. B. Dorsey, a democrat, moved an amendment, to vest the officer with unlimited power. to force the attendance of the miletia," leaving him to exercise such means as either resentment or wisdom might dictate. Those who voted for cloathing the military with this unprecedented force, were,

Dorsey, Stansbury, Harryman,
Claude, Duvail, Entory, Burgess,
Wright, Stephens, Forwood of Jacob, Bradford, Barney, Kell. Tilghman, Schnebly, Gabby and Mason.
The bill, as reported by the committee, contained a provision, "that the like honourable to them, and the alke honourable to them, and the display a consistent plan to lesses, and the calamities, the losses, alked the calamities, the losses, alked the calamities of war as now established," against the motion to strike lished," against the motion to strike out this provision, every democrat, but one, voted.

An amendment was moved by a fed eralist, declaring that the militia, when in actual service, should not be subject to the articles of war. To this every democrat was opposed.

After the bill had undergone all these modifications the senate proposed cer-tain amendments, which, if adopted, would have provided that the militia could not serve by substitute, but must serve in person, & that he might be detained 6 months in service, & be subject to the articles of war. ..

It is necessary to know, before you can correctly appreciate those exertions which, saved you from this tyranny thus aimed to be exercised over your persons, by the military of the state, the power which is to be exercised, under, the articles of war, to enforce the attendance of the regulars.

The regular, if absent from camp without leave, no matter that cause may detain him, is to be advertised as a deserter, seized on by a military force, and dragged, without any regard to his health or his wants, to the guard-house, chained, tried by a military balcus of the Levy Court of each is unknown, and divested of that ympathers of each county, and the pathy arising from a congentality of situation, and influenced by the pride is insuperable from the military charters. To all this, my fellow chitens, did that senate who beast so much now that the day of election approaches of their undeviating devotion to your terest, labour to consign you-While the federalists strove to every on the war from the wealth of the country, the senate, exempt generally from pe sonal service, and enjoying the wealth of the state, forced you into their ranks. While the federalists legislated that you might either go in person, hire a substitute or pay not more than lifty dollars, and not even that, if detained by sickness, or other good excuse; and then not for more than 60 days, the democrats attempted to pass laws that you should not have a substitute, but must go in person, or be forced by a military power, who might sentence you to be shot, without an allowance of any excuse, to serve for a period of time not exceeding six months.

You have heard much of the conscription law recommended to congress by Mr Monroe. You have read the law proposed by Mr. Mason in the Senate of the United States. You have been witnesses to the sensations which these two measures have produced through out the nation; compare them with these attempts made within your own state by the democrats, and judge, if the unrelenting severity of those pro-positions which I have detailed to you, do not equal in appression those which have been recommended to the congress of the United States, & that system of conscription introduced by Buo-naparte, and now reproduted by the friends of civil liberty throughout the representations of some federalist. Be not deceived by such stale tricks; turn to the Voterand Proceedings, & judge if my extracts are not made with candour and fairness; and if they are and unless you wish for laws breathing all the rigour which the democrats wish to infuse into your militia-system, and which will make you and yours the slaves of the military, repair to the hustings, and vote for the electors who support-those-federalists who advocate your nacticipation in the administration of the government, and the application of that republican maxim, that every rian ought to contribute to the defence of his country, according to the in erest

A VOTER.

Every person in the community is informed of the fact, that at the moment when the compensation law passed. thousands of our citizens and soldiers whose property and services were used and employed by the government in the late serious & bloody contest, were unnaid the compensation to which they were by law, and in grateful liberal justice, entitled Under such circumstances, a high-minded, virtuous and patriotic congress, it seems to me. would voluntarily and magnanimously have consented to endure privation for season, much more have spurned the idea of putting their hands into the treasury, to diminish the chance of an early requital of the blood and services freely yielded in the defence of the country. Who could have believed that the first congress, which convened after the termination of the war, sitting a-midst the ruins of the capitol, would have voraciously appropriated to their emoluments nearly $200,000 more than they would have received at the close of the session, aliuding to the compen-sation allowed by law, from the begin ing of the government? No one out of congress could have supposed it possi

John Binns, General Duane & President Madison.

What do the democrats think of Duane? they seem peculiarly sore and delicate on this point. Binns declares that Duane is no democrat, and for this plain roason, because he differs in opinion with the cabinet. Duane denounces our administration, because they have departed from the principles which they formerly avowed: and Binns denounces Duane, because he will not follow him and the president, and forsake his own principles. Binns is in high dudgeon with Duane, for not renouncing his own opinions with the same sang froid that the President of the U. Stares has done. Only let Gen. Duane tun away from his own opinions with the same celerity as President Madison fled from Bladensburg, and he will be taken into favour, as,a good, staunch, genuing, patent de-mocrat again. [Telegraph.]

Another Democratic Witness.

The editor of the Aurora is not the only democrat, once high in the tortured, which the incemity of the lander the juffuence of ece balling baris. We have not yet seen him denounced in any of the administralion papers as an apostate. Fed.

> From the Columbian. If under the present weight of salaries and patronage of civil officers of the United States, the press is almost universally bent to their purposes, how long can freedom lust, if we madly augment the prepon-derance? When an election approaches, do not the host of officers (too generally) manifest the zeal of crusaders for their patron & against republican principle? Is it compatible with the principles of republican economy and simplicity, that presidential clerks, &c. &c. should be enabled, at public expence, to sway that public, to corrupt that public, and to live in " royal state" Beware of the executive branch ! leath enters Republics by that door.

Has not executive influence in our councils and over our country made an usurped nomination tanta mount to election?

Is not this influence exerted through the various civil and other officers of government.

How is the presidency transmitted from hand to hand .- fust saving the appearance of popular elections?)—By executive influence. Shall we add fresh fuel to the fire that is consuming our independence? We hope not.
