It was necessary to divide the pow pra upon which the safety of the public liberty depended; to regutate them upon the principles of democracy which govern us; to remove all obstacles interfering with the regular course of government to make the Constitution executable, in order to insure its execu-

I flatter myself, Gitizen Senstors that this object has been attained, and that we shall concur with the House of Representatives of the people in realising public expectations. Elevated of the first magistracy of the state nothing is more satisfactory to me, citizen president, than the expression of the wishes of the Senate, communicated through you, and to witness the events which have brought us to this grand epoch of our political career accomplish ed before our eyes.

How gratifying it is to me to be able to express to the nation who have thus promoted me the acknow ledgements which I owe them for their incessant proofs of love and devotion- It is with the most ardeut disposition to accomplish itto live and die for the welfare and lappiness of my fellow-citizens, that before God, and in your presence, Gitizen Senators, I swear to the nation, to faithfully perform the office of the President of Hayti to maintain the Constitution to the utmost of my power; to respect, and cause to be respected, the rights and independence of the Haytian Lation.

After the ceremony a salute of 17 guns announced to the people that the President had taken the oatn. The House then rose and proceedto the Church.

The grenadier's of the President's foot guards formed the line on the right, during the march of the procession, and the chasseurs of the same corps on the left; the grenadiers opened and the horse chasseurs closed the procession. All the streets through which the procession was, to pass were crowded with citizens. Men, women, and children, on the joyful occasion, assembled from all parts to see their relatives and friends followed by their virtuous and worthy Chief. When the Procession reached the Church, Te Deum was sung. After it was over a thundering discharge of ar-tillery was heard from the terrace, the forts and all the vessels in the Roads. The President of Hayti then returned to the government Palace with the procession. In the evening an illumination took place throughout the city, and every inhabitant in retiring, carried peace and serenity of mind to their homes.

DUTCH OFFICIAL ACCOUNT OF THE BATTLE AT ALGIERS.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 16.

Stouts Courant Extraordinary -Lieutenant Arrans, of the naval service, this morning arrived from the Bay of Algiers, which he left on the first of September, at the office of the marine department, with despatches from Vice Admiral Capellen, of the following contents; Hon. Sir-Lord Exmouth during his short stay at Gibraltar, taving increased his force with some gun boats, and made all his arrangements, on the 14th of August the united squadrons

On the 10th, of the Cape de Gat, the Promethens joined the fleet. Captain Dashwood reported, that he had succeeded in getting the family of the British consult at Algiers on board by stratagem; but that their flight be ing soon discovered, the consul to-gether with two boats crew of the Prometheus, lad been arrested by the Day, who, having already received a with the Queen Charlotte in the same Nev. 31.

report of this steomic expedition, had made all preparations for all chattonic opposition, and summoning the inhabi-tants of the interior had already as men bled more than 50,000 men, both Moore and Arabs, ander the walls of

Inconsequence of a calm, and after wards by strong easterly winds, we were not before the Bay of Algiers until the 27th August, in the morning Gord Exmouth immediately sent by flag of truce a written proposal to the Dey, containing in substance, that the late atrocities at Bona having broken all former connexions, he demanded in the name of the Prince Regent:

I. The immediate deliverance up o all Christian slaves without ransom.

2. The restitution of all money which had already been received for the Sardinian and Neapolitan captives.

3 A solemn declaration from the Dey, that he bound himself like those of Tripoli and Tunis, to respect the rights of humanity, and in future, wars to treat all prisoners according to the usages of European nations.

4. Peace with his Majesty the King of the Netherlands on the like terms as with the Prince Regent.

On all these articles his Lordship expected an answer, yes or no, or hos tilities must immediately commence: His Lordship, on whom I waited i he morning, was afraid that he should that day be obliged to rest satisfied with coming to anchor, and confine himself for the night to an attack by bomb vessels. Tin and rocket boats Scarcely had I returned on board my vessel when the sea breeze sprung up, and the flee bore into the bay with press of sail; the four bomb vessels immediately took their station before the town, and every thing was prepared for the attack Shortly afterwards, his Lordship coinmunicated to me by private signals, "I shall attack immediately, if the wind does not fail." Upon this I im mediately made signal to form line of battle in the order agreed upon, in the supposition that all the officers must have been well acquainted with the position of the forts and batteries that ell to our share before the attack was to begin; but as it appears that the signal was not understood. I resolved to change the line, and lead it myself in the Melampus At half past one o'clock the whole fleet bore up in succession, the Melampus closing in with the rearmost ship of the English line; and at 15 minutes past two o'clock, we saw Lord Exmouth with the Queen Charlotte before the wind, with sails standing, come to anchor with three anchors from the stern, with her broadside in the wished for position within pistol shot of the batteries, just before the opening of the

This daring and unexpected manœu vre of this vessel (a three decker) ap pears to have so confounded the enem that a second ship of the line had al ready well nigh taken her position beore the batteries opened their fire which, how violent soever, was fully replied to.

Having told captain de Man that I wished, as speedily as possible, with the Melampus, and the other frigates in succession, to make our position or the larboard side of lord Exmouth, and to draw upon our squadron all the fire of the southern batteries, the captain brought his frigate in a masterly manner under the cross fire of more than one hundred guns, the bowsprit quite free of the Glasgow, with an anchor from the head and stern, in the requir ed position so as to open her larboard guns at the same minute. Captain Ziervogel, who was fully acquainted with the above plan, and with the bat teries, brought his frigate the Diana. nearly the same moment, within fathom's length of the place I had wish ed it, for our directed position. The Dageraad, captain Polders, immediately opened her batteries in the best di rection. The captains Van der Straten and Van der Hart, by the thick smoke, and not being so fully acquainted with the localities, were not so fortunate in the first moments: but worked with the greatest coolness, and under the heaviest fire, so as to give our batteries a good direction, The Eendragt, eapt. Lieutenant Wardenberg, which I had placed in reserve, in order to be able to bring assistance, remained under the fire of the batteries close by Our ships had not fired for more than half an hour, when Lord Exmouth acquainted me that he was very much satisfied with the direction of the fire of our squadron on the southern bat teries, because these giving now as lit tle himirance as possible, he commanded the whole of the Mole, and all the enemy's ships,

His Majesty's squadron, as well as the British force, appeared to be inspired with the devotedness of our magnanimous chief to the cause of all man kind; and the coolness and order with which the terrible fire of the batteries was replied to close under the massy walls of Algiers, will as little admit o description, as the heroism and self devotion of each individual generally, & the greatness of Lord Exmouth in par-ine o'clock, Lord Exmouth remained sted, and thus displaying such rance that all were animated with the same apirit, and the fire of the ships against that of a brave and desperate enemy appeared to redouble.

Shortly afterwards, the Queen Charlette, by the logsening of the burning wreck, being in the greatest denger, we were, under the heaviest fire, only auxious for the safety of our noble leader, but upon offering him the as sistence of all the boats, of the squadron, his reply was, "that having calculated every thing it behoved us by no means to be alarmed for his agiory, but only to continue our fire with a doubled zeal, for the execution of his orders, and according to his example."

His Lordship at last, about half an hour to ten o'clock, having completed the destruction in the mole, gave orders to retire without the reach of the enemy's fire, which I as well as all others. scrupled to obey, before the Queen Charlotte was in safety from the burnng ships.

in this retreat, which for the want of wind, and the damage suffered in the rigging, was very slow, the ships had still to suffer much from a new opened and redoubled fire from the enemies batteries, at last, the land breeze spring ing up, which lord Exmouth had reck oned upon, the flet at 12 o'clock, came to anchor in the mi dle of the bay. The Queen Charlotte, under the fire of the batteries, passing the Melampus under sail, his Lordship wished to be able to see me, in order to completely reward me by shaking my hand in the heartiest manner, and saving-" I have not lost sight of my Dutch friends they have swell as mine, done their best for the glory of the day."

This circumstance, and the general order of Lord Exmouth to the fleet, of which I have the honour to enclose a copy, must make the squadron hope for His Majesty's satisfaction

For our loss in killed and wounded have to refer you to the subjoined fist, it is remarkably small for ships exposed to a fire of eight hours duration, n comparison with that of the English ships. In the damage done to our rigging, &c. your Excellency will observe that we have been less fortunate. The day after the action, lord Exmouth sent a second summons to the dey, of which his lordship sent me a copy, it stated, that by the design on of half Algiers and of his whole na vy, the dey was now chastised his faithless conduct at Bona, &c. and that he could only prevent the total destruction of the town by the acceptance of the conditions of the preceding day. The signal of the acceptance of the conditions was the firing of three shots, which, three hours afterwards, we had the satisfaction of hearing. In conference with two persons emperer ed by the dey, on board lord Exments's ship, together with admiral Milne and captain Brisbane, were present, all the points were regulated. The conclusion the peace was for England and the Netherlands celebrated by the firing a salute of twice 24 cannon, and I have now the satisfaction of wishing you joy on the successful termination of the efforts of his majesty in the cause of humanity. [Here follows the praise bestowed by the admiral on the different officers of his squadron.] In proof of his adherence to the trea-y, the Dey must this day, at 12 o'clock, deliver up $300,000 and all the slaves must be ready for embarkation at the wharf. Those of our country are in number 26 or 27 all well, besides many others driven into the interior of the country and who cannot be here before

I shall have the honour. on a future opportunity to report farther to your Excellency, and am, with the highest respect, &c. &c.
