PEACH TREES.

Make boxes around your trees about one foot in height, and capacity, exclusive of tree, to hold a peck, fill this in with the bark taken from tanvats, pressing it a little together, and your trees will remain free from worms around the roots, which are so destructive to trees, as it is found that worms will not inhabit this bark if ever so old.

From the Saturday Magazine, OF RAISING AND FATTENING SWINE.

By J. Tyson.
Swine, though a very troublesome animal, seems to be indispensable to the farmer; but with proper management, the raising of them may be made a source of profit. First, be careful to select a good breed. From experience, I know there is an advantage in being particular in this respect. I will not pretend to say which are the best breed; the China, crossed with the English lop-eared hogs, make an excellent stock. Suitable pens, pasture, plenty of food, and care and judgment in feeding, are all subjects necessary to be attended to. The pens should be large and airy; a small portion of the pens should be covered close, so as to keep the hogs in the fall and winter from the inclemency of the weather; and the floors of the pens well flagged or paved with large flat stones, so as to prevent rooting: it is proper to have your hogs ringed; they are then not so quarrelsome; a close pen is injurious to their health. The pens should be cleaned once a week, and well littered with cornstalks, leaves, &c., and their nests or beds littered with clean wheat or rye straw; and buckwheat straw are very injurious to your hogs and pigs. A farmer ought to have his pen divided into three parts; one for fattening his winter hogs, one for fattening his small pork in the fall for market, and the other for his store hogs. By attending to your hogs in the manner above described, you will make a great quantity of excellent mahure. I have found the best season for raising pigs for store hogs, to have them to come about the beginning of July, then the sows will have a chance of ranging the stubble fields after harvest, and picking up the lost ears, and with the milk from the dairy, you will raise fine pigs. They should be weaned at about six or seven weeks old. They should be put into a pen, and fed on the surplus milk from the dairy, with a little Indian meal and clover grass; keep them clean, & they will thrive amazingly. As soon as potatoes are grown, a portion of them, boiled will answer with the milk nearly as well as Indian meal. Boiled apples, pears, squashes, pumpkins, &c., all make excellent food for young shoots, and much the cheapest. Every farmer, who wishes to raise pork for the market, ought to have a boiler fixed up for that purpose. It is certainly a source of advantage. Early in the month of May, as soon as there is sufficient pasture, ring your hogs and turn them out to pasture. It is best to have a lot on purpose, with water in it, that in the warm weather they may get drink and wallow; this keeps them clear of disease, which is essential to their thriving. For a few weeks after they are turned to grass, they should be pretty well fed, till they become reconciled to feeding on grass and a greater range of liberty than their pen afforded. After harvest the hogs should be turned into the orchard, that they may get the early ripe apples before the season of cider-making commences. The fattening of winter hogs is a matter of importance, and by proper management much may be saved. As soon as the Indian corn is fit to feed, the hogs should be put into the pen. Rye, buckwheat or Indian corn, ground together, boiled potatoes, pumpkins, &c., make excellent slop for them: it should be made thick and given to them three times a day, and as much of the soft Indian corn as they will eat clean. Hogs should be fed little at a time but often, and great care taken not to stalt them. The last two weeks of feeding I prefer Indian corn only and water. Their pen should be cleaned twice a week, and their bed made of clean straw. Swine are liable to a variety of diseases; to wit, mange, measles, stopping of the issues of the fore legs, &c. I believe most, if not all of those diseases, proceed from the filthy manner in which hogs are too frequently kept. The mange may be cured by sprinkling on the backs of the hogs wood ashes, and turning them out of a rainy day, putting oil on them; or the most effectual way is, to wash them with soap-suds, and then oil them; after this trouble, keep them clean. The flour of brimstone is said to be good for the measles. I have never yet had a measly hog. For the stopping of the issues in the fore legs, nothing is necessary more than to rub them with a corn cob, and open the holes with the end of a knitting needle or something of that kind.

CONGRESS.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, Thursday, Jan. 3.

Mr. Cannon from the committee on the subject of the militia, reported a bill to provide for the discipline of the militia of the United States; which bill was twice read and committed.

Resolved, That the committee on Military Affairs be instructed to inquire into the expediency of establishing an additional national armory, to be located on the Western waters.

On request of Mr. Cooke, of Ten. who desired time for a consideration of the subject, and by consent of the mover, the resolve was ordered to lie on the table for the present.

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs be instructed to inquire and to report to this house, whether any, and if any, what, alterations are necessary to be made in the component parts of the station issued to the army of the United States, and that said committee be also instructed to inquire into the practicability of regulating the issue of ardent spirits in such manner as more effectually to preserve the health and morality of the soldiers.

On motion, said resolve was ordered to lie on the table. On motion of Mr. Whitman, it was Resolved, That the committee on Naval Affairs be instructed to inquire into the expediency of authorising the building and equipment of an additional number of small vessels of war, of a force not exceeding 12 guns each, for the purpose of protecting the commerce of the United States in the West India Seas and Gulf of Mexico, and to prevent smuggling and piracy.

Mr. Campbell, from the committee on the subject of the apportionment of representation according to the fourth census, presented a table showing the results of the various ratios, which had been prepared for the committee, and on his motion it was ordered to be printed. It is expected that this important committee will report immediately—on Monday at latest.

MILITARY APPROPRIATIONS. Mr. Smith, of Md. then moved that the house do resolve itself into a committee of the whole, to take into consideration the bill for making partial appropriations for the support of the Military Establishment for the year 1822.

The house accordingly resolved itself into a committee of the whole on the subject, Mr. Baldwin in the chair. Mr. Smith, of Md. handed to the chair two letters from the Secretary of War to the committee of Ways and Means; which were read.

[The letters, dated Dec. 17 and 22, which Mr. S. handed to the chair, contained a statement of the appropriations for the quarter-master's Department, and the Indian Department, are exhausted, and that the appropriations for pay and subsistence of officers of the army will be out of the close of the year; & that a partial appropriation for 1822, of $150,000 for the quarter-master's Department, $100,000 for the Indian Department, and of $300,000 for the pay of the Army, is necessary. There is also a deficit in the appropriation for Revolutionary Pensions, for 1821, of $451,866, and that sum is necessary to complete the payments to pensioners for the year 1821.]

In the house the question of concurrence was taken on all the provisions of the bill (except that which provides for the Indian Department which, on motion of Mr. Ross, was not included) and carried. Mr. Ross moved that the question of concurrence, so far as it related to the appropriation for the Indian Department, be taken by yeas and nays. The motion was agreed to—but before the question was put, the house adjourned.

Friday, Jan. 4. Mr. Baldwin, from the committee of manufactures, to whom was referred so much of the President's Message as relates to manufactures, and the promotion of the national industry, reported, as he stated, by instruction of a majority of that committee, the following resolve: "Resolved, That it is incompetent at this time to legislate on the subject." And the resolve was ordered to lie on the table.
