The committee to whom were referred so much of the governor's message as relates to lotteries and lottery commissioners, beg leave to report-That they have had the same under their consideration, and are of opinion, that the resources of the state are sufficiently ample to meet all the demands on the treasury, without resorting to a system of state lotteries. Your committee think that if the policy of allowing lotteries in the state be continued, it ought to be confined as heretofore, to the granting of them, only for the purpose of accomplishing such public good as cannot be done by the limited means of individuals. They, therefore, recommend that the law authorising the drawing of state lotteries, and the law creating the office of lottery commissioners, be repealed. Your committee would also recommend, that in all private lotteries which the legislature may grant, that a tax of one persont be levied on the amount of all prizes in-said lotteries, and that the same be paid. or secured to be paid, to the treasurer of the western shore, before such lotteries be allowed to be drawn.

The superiority of symbolical unney, or curricy founded on, superpresented by substantial property, is most strikingly kemon strated in the present, alue, of the fretish gaper. It is a motorious tack, that was kendred dollars of English bank notes, will exchange in our comme till, cities, for one hundred and tuefore of the trades dollars. The reason is, that from an productive of first of symbolical money; the silver of four firsts of symbolical money; the silver of four firsts of symbolical money; the silver of four firsts and the following productive of the same to produce reduction in value as to produce reductions, and its consecution in the special covered to determine, and the reduction in value forces for distant copquests, and thereby to creat a demand foresister, he seem many rimaining in our banks wand to be featured in that event, or from any our which should raise alper to the part of paper in England, is too syldent to need arguments or illustration—and the banks of necessity, what then abandon all pretentions to a specie basis. Is it not then the extremity of folly to depend oppon adpreserious a happert for a system which has paralized the energies of the natils it not then the extrement of the period ponse presented a happire for a system which has paralised the energies of the nation, and reduced the people to a state of misery, desolation and rains?

It is with peculiar anxiety we have for some time watched the proceedings of the Legislature of Maryland, in regard to the Jew bill. And it is with no inconsiderable: Jew bill. And it is with no inconsiderable satisfaction we have traced the progress of intellectual improvement in this state, in the different reception this bill has met with by succeeding legislatures. On its first appearance, the scanty support of eight members forboded its abortion; but how favourably is not the ease now altered. The exertions of talent and philanthropy have dissipated the heavy cloud that rested on the borizon of the state; and there is but on the horizon of the state, and the training of a respectable majority. It is not now necessary to bring before the public view the many imperiously convincing arguments which, tecked with all the ornaments of fancy, and the various illustrations of crudition, the supporters of this bill laid before the supporters of this bill laid before the house; the people are too much appaged at present with the topics of local interest to scrutinise these with the necessary patience; but so soon as the legislature adjourns, there is no doubt they will be furpished by abler hands, with all the material gradifying tnem to judge impartially, a the cult of derniere resort. It were, however, apprateful in every friend of a system of generous policy, in every man that loves his country as the home of religious and civil liberty, in every breast that beats congenial when arguments of vivifying truth are uttered by men of ta-of vivifying truth are uttered by men of ta-lent in support of all he holds most dear up-on earth, to fass by in silence, and without atribute of gratitude, the indefaigable ex-tertions of the supporters of this hill. They, it is true, find a higher reward within their own capacious minds, than any acknowown canacious minds, than any acknow-lidgments in the ephemeral sheet of news can possibly afford; but it behooves their country to know the trien who most gloriously stood forward to redeem her character, that the may look to them when also supenses her honours, it behoves about friends to know thow they laboured in the cause of humanity and justice, that when they return to them, as I whand may grass theirs with deeper, brouder confidence.
