Now Orleans, Dec. 10, 1827.

Gentlemen—I have received the letter which the committee has done me the honour to write, thanking me for my assent to the co-operation in the arrangements which you may think necessary for the receiption of General Andrew Jackson in the Cathedral Church of this city. I bless Heaven, fellow citizens, that my days have been prolonged to the present time, when I may cherish the hope of seeing, before the close of my long carcer, the Hero of the 8th of January, 1815; him, who preserved a numerous population, of which the three-fourths have been born within the time that I have been among them the Unister of GOD. It is by this brave and generous man, that my spiritual children, the good inhabitants of this city, have been preserved from the ravages which would have followed in the event of the capture of the city by the invading British Army; it is to him that Louisiana, which I love, and where I have lived for more than fifty years, owes the preservation of the wise institutions under which we have the happiness to live. ANDREW JACKSON!!!

The love of your fellow citizens will recompense you in this worl, for the greats services which you rendered to Louisianato the whole Union, and an abetter life, a just and beneficent GOU will reward you with his choicest bened times. I have the himour to be, gentlemen with the greatest consideration, your ownide.
