By the Senate, February, 18th, 1831.

Gentlemen of the House of Delegates, The senate received several days ago your message proposing an adjournment on to-morrow, and delayed answering it, with a view to ascertain the situation of the business, and whether it could be disposed of by that time. The senate, from examination, is satisfied that the contemplated adjournment cannot take place consistently with the public interest, and therefore dissent from your proposition. There are several very important measures relating to the ravenue fore the state, internal improvement and education, now before the senste, in addition or which its factorial in addition or which its facto fore the senate, in addition to which, it is believed the senate has received from your honourable body, within the last four days, not less than seventy bills and resolutions, many of them are of an important character, and all deserving and requiring deliberate and respectful consideration. These cannot all he properly disposed of for some days, and alle senate therefore respectfully propose Saturday the 26th jbst. as the day of final adjournment.

By order,

By the Senate, Pebruary 17th, 1891.

Centlemen of the House of Delegates,
The senate asknowledges the receipt of your message of the 16th first requesting the return of the bill, which had passed your honourable body, and which had been sent to the senate, entitled, An act to authorise a subscription to the capital stock of the Baltimora and Susquehanna Rail Road Company, and respectfully declines acceding thereto. The bill was received by the senate on the 15th, and before the receipt of your message had been read the first time in the senate, had been referred to the committee on internal improvement, and a favourable report had been made upon it. The bill had thus been acted upon by the senate, and could not properly be withdrawn from its consideration. Independently however, of the situation of the bill in the senate, other objections exist to a compliance with your request. The adoption of such a course would be inconsistent, in the opinion of the senate, with the known parliamentary usage. It would be to subject, in an irregular manner, the action of one house to the controll of the other, upon all subjects which had previously passed the latter. How easy would it be for either branch thus to withdraw and negative, or cripple by injudicious amendments, any bill which had been passed by it, and which had been sent to the co-ordinate branch of the legislature. Suppose a bill, after discussion and deliberation, to have passed either branch by a very mall majority, and to have been sent to the other branch. suppose in such a case, the arrival or return to the house, or several persons, who had not heard the discussion or participated in the deliberation upon the subject, but who were nevertheless hostile to the bill. It would be in their power, by a union with the minority on the passage of the bid, to send a message, get back the bill, and negative it. The senate uses these cases not from the slightest suspicion that such would be the result on the present occasion; of that they entertain no apprehension. They use these cases as illustrative merely of the effect which might follow from the idention of a novel, and, as the senate conceives, an irregu lar course that would, authorise a regress by one house that a bill should be retinized to it, after that been soft to an subjected to the action of another. No inconvenience ca result to your honourable body from this determination, for several other modes of proceeding are will open, by which you may attain your end. The senate will most respectful ly beg leave to suggest or o of these modes from among man that might be cited. You design to make anenchenes to the bill, you can embody these emendments in the form of a supplement, and if approved by the senate, they will of course be passed, if me, and they be rejected, still your nonourable body will be in the same situation that it would have been in, has those amountments been inserted in the original bill, for in that case the bill itself would be reject to all which your honourable body are noncourable tody. Added to all which your honourable body has not thought fit to put the senate in possession of the amendments contemplated, so
