VOL. LXXXVIII.

POLIS, THURSDAY, JANUARY 3, 1833.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JONAS GREEN.

Church-Street, Annapolis.

RICE-THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM.

MISCELLANY.

From the London Athenaeum. THE LAST PRAYER OF MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS.

O Domine Deus! speravi in O care mi Jesu, nunc libera me:-*Desidero te— *Languendo, gemendo, et genuflectendo, *Adoro, imploro, ut liberes me,' was the holy twilight hour, and clouds in crimson or pride it'd thro' the golden firmanent, in the calm evening he prasint's cheerful song was hushed by every e City's voice stole faintly out, and died the hum d as Night's sombre shades came down o'er Day's a resplendent eye. faded fice, from a prison cell, gazed out upon the sky; to that face the glad bright sun of earth for aye had set, nd the last time had come to mark eve's starry who can paint the bitter thoughts that o'er her her pail lips gave utterance to feeling's deep hile shalow'd from life's vista back, throng'd, 'mid her bursting tears, he fantasies of early hope-dreams of departed years: here Pleasure's light was sprinkled, and silver voices flung heir rich and echoing cadences, her virgin hours among:

Then there come no shadow on her brow—no tear
to dim her eye;

Then there frown'd no cloud of sorrow in her be-ing's festal sky. rchance at that lone hour the thought of early hen she listened to the low breath'd tones of him the idol One, ho shone in her mind's imaging, first ray of pleasure's sun: rchance the walk in evening bours—the impas-sioned kiss and yow.

sioned kiss and yow.
he warm 'ear on the kindling cheek—the smile
upon the brow;
at they came like flowers that wither—and the light of all had fled,
is a hue from April's pinion o'er earth's budding W now exp. bosom shed!

feelings way; was the last, dim night of life—the sun had sunk to rest, and the blue twilight haze had crept on the far off he ws, ellistened the account and the blue twilight haze had crept on the far off he ws, ellistened the account and a seastruck mountain's breastind thus as in her sadden'd heam the tide of love grew strong; our'd her meek, qu mournful sogg: The shades of evening gather now o'er the mysteri-the viewless winds are whispering their strain of breezy mirth; The gentle moon hath come to shed flood of glory the silence of this calm repose—the beauty of the ground, nd in the free, sweet gales, that sweep along my prison bar, borne the soft, deep harmonies of every kind ling star: the blue streams glancing in the mild a chasten'd light,

the gem lit fleecy clouds, that steal along brow of night. like spring -e Joy should cheer my pilgrimage with ad-like specific probability and specific probability with the songs of Hope for ever flown voice which flung youth's warm happiness ne chaunt of youth's warm happiness fro hall I drink no mure the melody of babbl or bird, r the scented gale of summer, as the leaver are stirred?

hall the pulse of love wax fainter, and shrink from death, st bodd-like thoughts that lit my head chilling breath?

fade in its have pass'd the dreams of childhood and hopes are gone; and turn to thee, itedeemer! oh, holy One! ho' to rose of health has vanished the bath here apply.

ate hath been spoken, e by one the golden links re broken; fe's fond chair my spirit turn to Thee, th in huble suppliance at thy fee o hast crown'd my y foolish holdson li low hef the golden extacts of its young, careless heart to earth loved, may play in the on express boug eloquent; yet, I shall pass light of He Shall join the lost, the lord of earl each kindred breast,

""Where the wicked cease from troub!
Weary are at reat!"
Philadelphia.

Phese lines, so melodious in the original ceptible of equally melodious translation when by the unfortunate Slant, a short the b melancholy execution

A LEAF FROM A REEFUR'S On the morning of the 15th kov. of our seamen died, and, as there we appearance of a severe gale, le with a same afternoon. The functal the Episcopal characterist read over poor fellow's body consigned to and the order given to pipe down My companion regarded with m notonous walk, forefund aft the qu on the lee-side, talking over the man just gone, and the had bee ving a look at the skipped (of whom salutary awe, just to see w! good humour. He was stand cob's ladder, watchit; the thre douds. that seemed to grow blacker every moment. The first stationed himself upr. an a quarter, observing quietly ti that, at one moment, disp pure white, and the next spoodrift from one wave to ty now and then bearing upon the Captain, as if is fre you going to order to flee lurch All at once the craft gas so did Harry and I; ater ame plenti ulty into the case of our tied and for siccessiel. Our It. a sea to: t de dinst enorgh its curling wien we saw inichnati firther mirth. ref topsails res nill pipe companied by Ref was take in kethat t tressel was got el fore-topail and storm the thoroughly hilled, top ofcome on deck. ed to hear theorder to 'pipe down," but a near passed with no toise exdovn.' but a the with the sway, cep the strains of the rizzle, said every now and the with the swas of the a. making long held sway, ing a clear treath over us without proving anygreat edition to our chaffit. A little arterings way, was the last directors and the fire-top-satisfit was a noise that directors. the am nomers, one of our anchen getting off he was, ellivened the accuse without off he was, ellivened the accuse without off he was ellivened the accuse without our amusement. In force the anchoras secured, a sea struck unorward, and whed over bard our old Boatwain and threaten; the butswain and one am got on hong gather now o'er the mysteribookagain, and the other two was blotted for higher book of life. In the corse of a set time the author was secured the fore-trinstar-sail haded down, and ce vessel to as the expession is, like a tek.

That noticed that during the 10th there ad bien strong symptoms of disastrobation mond the old senach, and accides put the in possession of the cause. I wastanding in the vaist, leans against a guest death. in possession of the cause. I wastanding in the vaist, leaning against a gun and holding on in the life- he, when I head an old quarter-master gamble to a per officer, (It's no use working after all. The for when o launch poor fellow's hut overpoard on a riday, a-Linnie the ch would'nt be a safe ore till banyan das over.'ad I seen the other Carey's Chickens, th er nor soge tar, jist befite Ila ins was lau ed over they stood board, and a ter tot norrard, and hat the last a them all: rey monke and, moreover, that Jenney. as up. a s! was pick-now the ne when s Araby, (a ed up in the lesert bloody soger units, a look out on he to ne.) took piped to d to wind dinner, and ke ward till they tht watch the afternation and by fo groz. I knowd that ir supersti-This let me int th ecret; an tion had been f and a m buried on a day conside The men had de their high xpectation s, and had state of discipl of saving the l own l they were it not been for habituated to Tücer bodings migh d all hands have been sac le sugratition. The conv ll ands splice interrupted the main brag cond i itatio waited for a the hall, or grog tab. office go be for one half e, and get ents; some refre , who pre-icers of that found one npliment sented th with a mess, to: large pitchand never sept receired, that imparted more gratification to the | infernal paraphernalia, he had me completely | mill stone-and finally sprung into the water. presenters. One middy was placed in the corner of the steerage, with his feet braced against the lashed table, holding the pitcher, while the rest were rummaging the locker, for knives and tin pots; these were soon procured, and never was a merrier supper eaten on ble we might bring up every moment.

When the next banyan-day (Friday) came ound, I asked the old boatswam's mate, how tound, I asked the old boatswam's mate, how we had got clear, after burying a man on Friday? He said, that it might be the loss of the two men that night, was sufficient, but he added, shaking his head, till, the loss of the cup to dry like a latinered napkin, as a added, shaking his head, till, the loss of the cup to dry like a latinered napkin, as a added, staking his head, till the long queue whipped byth ears, maybap you wont weathwhipped ball ears, mayhap you wont weather to also so easy the next time, and when Franks. But alas! I opened my eyes, glisyou've been on salt water as long as I have. you'll find banyan-day-an't no day to wet a da't man's jacket!"

THE GREEK BARBER.

. I crossed the ferry to Poros. Now the conveniences for the indulgence of the mr angry the conveniences for the indulgence of the on the lingly limited; and seeing the depot of an arcrest of dantly stocked with clean towels and keen t ashower of looking razors, I entered, and intimated my this and ever wish to have my hair cut, and the performance insping look of other little operations in his line, to the when effect that I might be made comfortable. in a ther reef; seated myself complacently upon the beach which was extended round the room, and folded my legs under me with as much grace se oft into the las the little practice I had had in that tion enabled me. Seeing that I was a Frank --Franks generally pay better than natives— the master of the shop approached me with an perce; we air of considerable deference. He was a good natured looking Greek, particularly neat and trun in his attire. He wore his crimson Phesi janutingly on one side, discovering a great portion of his very clear shorn terrale. His evebrows were reduced to a beautifully fine dismited, but curved line, his mustaches, though very large the west er, and thick, were belanged to a harr in fact, it to induly in might be said of him, that he carried the best recommendation to his customers it his face.

and his girdle was garnished with several rathe bads-cain. Zors of very poculiar construction, very nar-nd it was not low in the blade and firmly fixed in straight wooden handles. He addressed me with an lequin, begive it such a dexterous twist on Or, sie Effendi, 'Titheless,' (command me sir! what is your wish!) I signified my intentions. 'Effthese,' said he, —(speedy)—and. with his left hand, stretching the strap that hung from his middle, he smoothed it down with his right, and ended by giving it two or three smart slaps, that sounded like the smart crack of a rifle. The art of making this noise is as peculiar to the burbers of the east, as the cracking a whip is to the Crench postilion. Having strapped a razor he removed my cap, and I then thought it high time to enter into a remonstrance, saving that I did not wish to have my head shaved, but simply my hair sequious perpetrator of all these atrocities had cut. If understand you so, said he, and am going to do it. But, iterrupted I, sarely many ages. not with a razor, have you no got a --imitating the action of a pair of scissors with my finger. Do not be afraid,' said he, and smile of contempt passed over his features as he, without further parley, applied his ra-zor to my devoted head, and scraped from it a quantity of hair. 'There,' said he, of you ed from its native element. The following is not satisfied, I will send to my uncle Theodoree, the tailor, for his shears. compelled to submit, though in the full ex-pectation of being scalped at every stroke of his accursed tool. operation ended, I was not a little surprised to find my hair very decently cut, and myself unhurt. the neck; and having washed inv chin and checks with his fingers, and rubbed them with a piece of hard soap, he removed the basin, and putting his foot on the bench on which I sat, he laid my head gently upon his knec. He went on to shave me, not as our barbers do, by drawing the razor towards himself, but by pushing it from him outwards, pinching the skin up into ridges, and taking only at a stroke the crown of each ridge, making it not only tedious, but to me an excruciating operation, although, on the other hand, a very perfect one, for the face will remain smooth periect one, for the face will remain smooth and beardless for a day or two. They seem to cut about right and forty hours' growth beneath the kin. This ended, he put some questions to me; to which I, having no idea of the consequences, but supposing some mat-ter of course, nodded an assent. He then tucked several towels down my neck and back, and gave me another pewter basin of the same construction as the first, but much larger. I had before observed a wooden bracket like an old fashioned gallows, probracket like an old fashioned gallows, projecting from the wall over my head, though without suspecting its use. Upon this he suspended a pewter pail having a stop-cock in the bottom. If then produced a large wooden bowl, containing a quantity of soap, and with a piece of raw silk, made a wash sufficient to wash the whole population of the island. I saw him deposit this on the bench by his side and bare his arms to the elbow. I by his side and bare his arms to the elbow. I Ue anxiety, and even apprehension: but en-in his power; and as to remonstrance, he took an effectual method of cutting short any sole-cisms I might have committed against the dig-nity of Greece, by turning the stop-cock of the bucket above me, and with the thought, down came a bucket of scalding washore, with all the luxurious appliances in this world, and the smile of woman to glad-ance was gone. I would have thrown the baden the feast, although we were were not far sin at him, but then my whole body must from a lee shore, and thought it quite proba- have been parboiled; I had nothing left but to endure. At last the deluge coased Now, thought I, now, thou perfidious barber, -though warning to all thy detestable craft how they tening with the fire of fury, but to be quenched with tears of torture. Oh, the lather! the lather! In a moment I was smothered-eyes, aose, ears and mouth-with the very sublimated essence of soap sads! The souls of the great grand father of all barbers throughout all generations; must have concentrated their wickedness in this individual. He insinuated the compound into my eyes, he blew it into my nostrils, he crammed it into my month, and thrust it into my ears. Soap sudand hot water! soap suds and hot water!! soap suds and hot water!!!--three times over. I can do no more; 'cis like Alfonso's dagger-

It rouses borrid images - away with it! At last, he took from a dome-topped towel corse, that stond in the centre of the room, over a basin of burning charcoal, a hot nap kin, which he folded, turban like, upon my head, while with another, he dried my sun-ken countenance as well as he could. I was completely subdued-my spirit was broken; he might have tweaked me by the nose, and I should scare have known it; but yet I won dered why these latter kindnesses were vouchsafed me. Alas! it was only to prolong my existence till I had endured, to their full ex tent, the enormities the monster yet meditated against me. He took my hand in one of his, and, placing the other upon my shoulder, ight be said of him, that he carried the best commendation to his customers in his face. From his waist hung a broad leathern strap, ten over this part of my narrative; the remembrance is too painful to dwell upon. He took possession of my head, and causing it to perone side, producing a report that sounded, to my hearing, almost the only faculty I had left, like the crack of donn! I thought the whole vertebral column was dislocated. He then placed me upright, my back against the wall, retreated some three or four pices, and raising l's lands, rushed with outspread palms against my chest, with such force as to cause the involuntary ejaculation of ha! as loud as an Irish pavior. The measure of his iniquity now being full, he called for a tchibouque and a cup of coffee, and, presenting them to me

STORY OF A PIKE.

The desperate voracity of the pike is not a remarkable and rather ludicrous instance of its possession of both characteristics, for the truth of which we can safely pledge our veracity. An acquaintance, who is a perfect en-When he pronounced the thusiast in the science of Angling, sometime was not a little surprised ago strapped the creel over his shoulder, took o find my hair very decently cut, and myclf unhart.

He then proceeded to place under my chin his pocket, set off, on a piscatory pilgrimage, a pewter basin, with a large rim cut out to fit to the banks of the Clyde. "Here he casually encountered a shepherd, with his Colley at his foot, and whilst exchanging news and a pinch of rappee with the pastoral patriarch, our acquaintance observed a frog spring out of the grass in the water-which it had no sooner done than an immense pike shot with the speed of lightning from beneath the bank, and the next moment poor Monsieur Frog be came an inmate of the monster's insatiable maw. In an instant, the five piece hickory rod was screwed together, the hooks fixed to the line, and another unfortunate 'paddock, as the shepherd termed it, being soon found and transfixed, our friend retreated back to a proper distance and threw in the bait. No sooner had it dropped into the water than it was in the jaws of the pike. when the barbs were for hwith struck into his gums, and after about half an hour's desperate tussle, a inge 1216. fish was laid on the green sward. Whilst our friend was undoing his rod and tackle, having made the shepherd a gift of the prize, the colley that had watched the sport eemingly with much attention, was going snuffling and smelling round the captive, and wagging his tail evidently with great satisfaction. Tired at last with scrutinizing, the unsuspicious quadruped sat down with his rump towards the fish, and the bushy tuft of his tail lying temptingly near the jaws of the latter it snapped at and caught hold of it. No words can paint the terror and surprise of the poor colley at this unwonted assault on witnessed all this preparation with some lit-tle anxiety, and even apprehension: but en-cambered as I was by my position and his wheeled round with the circular rapidity of a thinking, no doubt, that his assailant would prefer emancipation and safety in his native element, to the gratification of a malicious revenge; and so no doubt it woulds but the wishes of both were fated to be baulked—the hair having got so warped round the pike's jaws and grinders, that the latter was totally unable to disengage itself. Away swam the dog across the river, the pike tugging and tearing with might and main-now pulling poor colley the one moment fairly below the water by sheer weight and strength; the next. lifting his hurdles high in air, as it sprung aloft in its struggles to get free-at every pull the terrified quadruped bellowing forth his alarm; whilst the two spectators, completely overcome by the ludicrous novelty spectacle, absolutely roared with laughter till the tears coursed one another down their no-ses' with downright mirth. Having landed on the opposite bank, the colley took direct for his master's cottage (which was a gunshot or two off the river) at full speed—the pike throwing incessant pirouettes in the air, to each of which a lengthened howl was responded. Anxious to see the termination of this laughable affair, our friend accompanied the shepherd across a neighbouring ford, and on arriving at the domicile, found the whole family, wife, weans, dogs, cats, and chuckies,. in a state of tumultuous uproar and confusion that baffles description. The unfortunate colley had crept under the bed with his tailpiece, whence he literally sent forth shricks of agony and terror. Having pulled him out by the neck, the gudewife's shears were put in equisition, and the poor dog was soon freed from his truly unwilling persecutor; yet notwithstanding all the bumping and thumping which the latter had undergone in its awkward career to the cottage, our friend assures us that the voracious animal actually snapped at and sunk its teeth into the porridge stick which was employed to force open its jaws! After resting himself a little, and giving the gratified shepherd, in addition to the fish, a caulker from his flask, our friend resumed his pilgrimage, highly diverted with the strange and unexpected sport he had met with.

Dumfries Journal.

The Rail Road now in use from Amboy to Bordentown, is thirty miles in tength. It is said that when the whole arrangements are completed, which will be in a few days, the travelling over it will be accomplished in about fifty minutes .- N. Y. Mer. Adv.

SLANDER SUIT.

The Albany Daily Advertiser, of Thursday tates, that at the present term of the Circuit Court, held in that city, a suit for slander was tried, in which G. W. Ryckman, was plaintiff, and Joseph W. Perkins, ex sheriff of London, defendant. The jury on Wednesday rendered a verdict for plaintiff of seven thousand dollars. Mr. Ryckman was one of the Editors of the Albany Daily Advertiser.

From the United States Telegraph.

NATURAL WONDERS. It is very surprising, that two of the greatest natural curiosities in the world are within the United States, and yet scarcely known to the best informed of geographers and naturalists. The one is a beautiful water-fall in Franklin county, Georgia; the other a stupen-dous precipice in Pendleton district. South Carolina; they are both faintly mentioned in the late edition of Morse's Geography; but not as they merit. The Tuccoa Falls are much higher than the falls of Niagara. The column of water is propelled beautifully over a perpendicular rock, and when the stream is full it passes down without being broken. All the prismatic effect, seen at Niagara illustrates the spray of Tuccoa. The Carolina, is an awful precipice of 900 feet. Many persons reside within five, seven, or ten miles of this grand spectacle who have ever had curiosity or taste enough to visit it. It is now however occasionally visited by curious travellers, and sometimes men of science.

Very few persons who have once cast a glimpse in the almost boundless abyss, can again exercise sufficient fortitude to approach the margin of the chasm. Almost eve in looking over, almost involuntary falls to the ground, senseless, nerveless and hapless; and would inevitably be precipitated headlong and dashed to atoms, were it not for measure of caution and security, that have always been deemed indispensable to a safe indul-gence of the curiosity of the visiter or specwhence it is usual to gaze over the wonderful deep, has in his imagination, a limitation, raduated by a reference to instances with which his eye has been familiar. But in a monent, eternity as it were, is presented to his astonished senses; and he is instantly overwhelmed. His system is no longer subject to his volition or his reason, and he falls like a mass of pure matter. He then revives, and in a wild delirium surveys a scene, which for a while he is unable to define by description or imitation.

1

How strange it is the Tuccoa Fall and Ta-ble Mountain, are not more familiar to Ame-ricans! Either of them would distinguish an empire or a state to Barope.