"Library," by prompt payment of there scription, very sincere acknowledgment endered, and a continuance of their page age respectfully requested. ADAM WALDIN

> WILLIAM BRYAN MERCHANT TAILOR, '

T KES this method of returning haves thanks to his friends, and the policy heretofore bestowed upon him, and brief to inform them, that he has been from the heavy columity which before he 29th October, to remove his sho brick building owned by Washington 6. In Esq. one door below the Store of Mean E of Dr. Dennis Clausie, where he intendem ing on his business in his usual manen, where he will be happy to accommoda friends in the line of his profession. H short time, to be enabled to reinstate! former patronage of his friends, together w the that of the public at large.

$50 REWARD.

in Broad Neck. Anne Arundeles ty, near Annapolis, on Tuesday BILL MILLER, ile is about Twenty years of age, about feet high, a dark Mulatto, stoops in side and his uncommonly large feet, he token the ricty of clothing with him, among older who leather cap and black hat, blue and which sey jacker and trowsers, a drab fulle jid. &c. &c. Winnever apprehends said reas secures him in Jai so that I get him gashall receive a reward of $50 if takes a state, or $100 if out of the state of Mayle and if brought home all reasonable may JOHN RIDOUT, dE Inne-arundel County, &ct. of the Orphans Court of Anne-Arandel ty that he is in custody of one of the orbits of the County aforesaid for deep that he is in custody of one of the orbits of the county aforesaid for deep that praying for the benefit of the Inscherible that he is a county aforesaid for deep that he is a county aforesaid for deep that this state a constitution of the Inscherible that the the Inscheribl perty of the said insolvent debut, and the Jethro Lynch Smith having also gives be with security approved by inedfor his property of the county court on the third Mondayith next, to assure and interest of the security court. next, to answer such interrogatoricas propounded to him by any of his cross as so to answer such allegations as mark against him by any of his creditors at said Jethro Lynch Smith having takes the before me, as prescribed by the said less Laws for the delivery of his property. It are therefore to certify, That I have his granted a personal discharge to the said Lynch Smith. Given under my hand his day of September, in the year one that eight hundred and thirty-three.

GIDEON WHILE sDAY

CASII IN MARKETO THE subscriber wider purchase a number of Store of both sexes, for which let now in Cash , kinker or the store of the stor

n, and Wed

82.50

1,50 2,00

pay in Cash a higher pide any other purchaser in the ket. Persons having the light through the pide to the process of the process of the process of the pide through the pide th

James Hunter's Tavern. WILLIAM HOOFE Annapolis Oct. 24-1f.

PRINTING Neatly executed at OFFICE.

The Atarpland Gazette.

ANNAPOLIS, THURSDAY, JUNE 12, 1834.

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY JONAS GREEN,

THE DRICK BUILDING ON THE PUB-LIC CIRCLE.

ICE-THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM

MISCELLANEOUS

From the Pilgrims of the Rhine. THE FAIRY'S REPROACH. the glaw worn's lamp in the dewy brake;
by the gossimer's airy net;
the shiring skin of the faithless snake;
the shiring skin of orget,
On teach me to forget,
Can teach so well that homan spell
As thou, folse one!

As thou, filse one!

the firy dunce on the greenward smooth;
By the winds of the gentle west;
the bring stars, when their soft looks soothe.
The waves on their mather's breast:
The charten the lore!
By which like withered flowers,
The leaves of buried bours.
Blossom no more!

Blossom no more:

y the tent in the violet's bell;

By the may on the secured bough;
y the lone green is be where my sister's dwell;
And thine oath forgotten you,
Feach me to hive,
Nor tenn with thoughts that pine Declores so false as thine!

— Evely me thy lore,
And one thou lov's no more

Will dess thee and forgive!

A DREAM. stations, this night, have struck more terror. The exploit Rebard, thin could the substant Or en thousands sudders, armidallin proof Antibid by Stillow Richmond.—Shakespeure. As the last chime of the distant monastery ick died upon the breeze. I entered the a entwined with ivy and o'ergrown with re now the habitation of I wandered musically through its mas-partile, and entered a spacious hall, croofs had off resounded with shouts of ment and laughter, over the flowing wasugh a lofty gothic window streamed pale light of Lunar. It fell upon a trip, r, partially closed, on the opposite side of room. I made towards it, and laying hold toon. I made towards it, and taying hold thering exerted all my strength to raise it. The rusty binges grated harshly, and at 2' yielded to the pressure of my arm.— edianp moisture that proceeded from this rk recess, caused an involuntary chill to to foot. dventure seizing me at the moment, and ing impelled by some supernatural power, incrimined to descend the flight of steps that sented themselves to my view, and explore kas Erebus! Nothing daunted, I drew loak tightly around my person, and un-taked my sword. I had not proceeded far, re a slight glimmering light was visible at further end of the cavern. I quickened pice, not doubting to find a den of rob-s.—After a little wearisome toil, I guined, out accident, a projection in the wall, a ast which I leaned for a few moments, unermined whether to proceed or retrace my steps. A moment's thought, and I had ded. Heedless of danger, I unconsciousadvanced with rapid steps, gaining every ment on the bright beacon that beamed bee me like a star of hope. It was not long I reached the place from whence the light ceeded. A confused din, as of many voices ingry consultation, issued from the arched I silently crept close to it and listen-She must die,' said one of the men, se coarse hollow voice scemed to indicate passion that raged within his unmanly other, twe have shed blood enough Look! t your fiend-like malice would have butch--Think you I will suffer the deed to be Dare out raise thy hand to harm tis still your wish to stay me in my revenge, ill seek it over your dead carcass. Preatly, the sound of swords, clashing violent together, issued from the room. I concludant ightly, they were engaged in mortal most. Deeming it compatible with the honour of a reman, 1 determined to rescue the female ioner from a cruel-death. Agreeable to a conclusion, I cautiously advanced by the le of the wall some few paces, with the full rhose of my soul immoveably fixed. Obeysthe sudden impulse of my fearless heart, raped into the room, and confronted the deared by any of the desperadoes that thro garound the fighting chieftain and his admary.

blady, and here I swear in the presence of tourales to strike you lifeless to the

The first object that met my view, were bodies of a man and woman, who lay up-the stone pavement dead. Their heads re severed from their shoulders; large and veins as I gazed upon this revolting spectacle; I turned my eves from the spot.

In another part of the room, I perceived a very young and beautiful female, whose finely shaped form greatly contrasted with the rough and robust frames of the villains with which she was su rounded. Her dark auburn hair hung dishevelled down her finely chisseled and swan-like neck. Her hands were clasped together, as if imploring the protection of Heaven.

The conflict still continued with unabated fury. The curses of either grew louder and louder as they became more and more excited. Presently, one fell to rise no more. The fiendish wretch hath the body hence. The fiendish weetch hath forfeited life for his presumption, cried the victor. The band and their leader disappear ed into the extroom with the coopse. I rushed forward, seized the young lady cently by the arm, and implored aer to follow me. She did not he situte to comply with my desire. well knowing worse hands than those I was rescuing her from, one could not fall in-Finding her too weak to run, I raised astened from the room.

tected the sounds of my retreating footsteps, and ere I had advanced an hundred paces from their hellish den, they were following in my path. What was to be done? My arms were ncumbered with an almost lifeless burtnen. Notwithstanding I still continued to fly along the vaulted passage with the swiftness of the deer. I could plainly distinguish the steps of six or seven men in the pursuit. The glating light which they held gleamed amid the darkness and dispelled it. - With great exertion, I reached the projection in the wall, and sank ex hausted behind it. - The action for a moment fore my pursuers came up. Not thinking to find us benind the wall, they passed on, with rage sparkling in their countenances. The lights became mellowed in the distance, and I again breathed freely. 'Fear nothing,' I whis pered into the ears of the gentle creature that leaned her head upon my bosom. Our s fety was short lived. The ruffians finding themselves banked, and believing I had been too nimble for them, were now carelessly retrac-ing their steps. They all passed the spot where we lay concealed, except one, who, as if impelled by some sudden thought, cost his fierce eves benind the wail, and discovered us. I could see the flush of rage grow de per beaming in his eye, he scann dome from head who returned in great haste, but not in time to save their fellow murderer from the death he justly mented, and which I inflicted. There was no means of escape now left, other than that of fighting my way thro' tien; therefore, springing on my feet, I determined to sell my life dearly. The point of my sword met the breast of the first advancing foe, who soon lay gasping at my feet. The rest, exasperated at the death of two of their companions, pressed upon me, mutering cur-ses, thich, in the clatter of our swords, es-caped my ears. Another fell—and out three plack him from the reaching dream, in which caped my ears. Another foil-and out three caped my errs. Another ferrand survey and the remained to oppose me. They dreading lest I should escape them after all their efforts to prevent me, hollowed for more of their band, at the same tive attacking me with greater the same tive attacking me with greater means. fury than ever. They at length forced me on my knees, and in that posture I was obliged to defend inveelf for some minutes. Conscious that I could not maintain the unequal contest much longer, I made a despe-rate effort, and recovered my footing. Meanwhile, several more of the gang were rapidly advancing to join in the combat. My trusty advancing to join in the combat. My thosy sword continually gleamed in the uncertain light emitted from their lamps; wherever it fell destruction followed. Now, as my reviving courage give me double strength, a cowardly villain crept behind and stabbed me in the back. I fell. The young lady matched within my extended arms, with the te lies the parents of this innocent girl, rushed within my extended arms, with the intention of shielding me from harm by her body. A savage shout of triumph rent the passage from end to end, as their weapons y, and here I swear in the presence of urales to strike you lifeless to the He ceased and the other instantly remed—Think you I will be baffled in my sires? Not the heart of Egbert can never it. till the last blood of this accursed race scarding on the damp floor of this vault. The little strength I had left was exhausted by the effort. The dim lights receded from my view—the dark, scowling visages of the murdererably, the sound of swords, clashing violent-together, issued from the room. I conclud-the same excruciating agony—the dead, hea-vy burden of my breast became lighter—my senses seemed to be fast sinking into the sleep of death, -I awoke, -thank God 'twas but a

From Willia's First Impressions of Europe.
RELICS OF POMPEH.
I have devoted a week to the nuseum of Naples. It is a world any thing like a description of it would tire even an antiquary. It is one of those things (and there are many in Europe.) that fortunately compel travel. You must come abroad to get an idea of it.
The first day I buried myself among the dining rooms, their chambers and their market places. And here were gathered in one place, their pictures, their statues, their cook ing utensils, their ornaments, the very food

A curious corner in one of those cases was that containing the articles found on the toilet of the wealthiest Pompeian's wife. Here were pots of rouge, ivory pins, necklases, earrings, bracelets, small silver mirrors. &c. In the next case were two loaves of bread, found in Two large cases of precious gems, cameos centre of the room, among which, by the way, is filled with estables honey comb, grains, are several cinerary urns, in which the ashes of the dead are perfectly preserved, and nu-merous small glass lachrymatories, in which the tears of the survivors were deposited in the tumbs.

The brazen furniture of Pompeii, the lamps Trees, to which the lamps were suspended like fruit, vines, statues holding them in their hands, and numerous other co-trivances were among them, far exceeding in beauty any similar furniture of our time. It appears the ancients did not know the use of the fork, as sand things in this must um, one must imagine a modern city. Boston, for instance, complete ly buried by a terrific and unexpected convulsion of nature. Its inhabitants mostly scape. over it, and its very locality is forgotten. Near two thousand years elapse and then a neasant digging in a field strikes upon its runent, with all its utensils, books, pictures, houses and streets in untouched preservation. What a subject for speculation! What food oldest sailors declared to be the largest they chapter of history were this? Far more interesting is Pompen. For the age in which it lived and the characters who trod its streets that deep made, in case they should break over the largest they had ever seen; they were coming down upon us very fast. Every preparation was immediated and the characters who trod its streets. this wed and the characters was troughable in history, are among the most remarkable in history, are a few processing the most remarkable in history, and the perts opened, two guns with shot were filled in the perts opened, two guns with shot were filled in the perts opened, two guns with shot were filled in the perts opened, two guns with shot were filled in the perts opened, two guns with shot were filled in the perts opened, two guns with shot were filled in the perts opened, two guns with shot were filled in the perts opened, two guns with shot were filled in the perts opened, two guns with shot were filled in the perts opened, two guns with shot were filled in the perts opened in the perts op The handsome counters through which I had wandered a day or two ago, and from which was brought the antique chair, were the lars and statesmen of his time. speculate endiesely the stand it is that which cle-makes these lands of forgotten empires so delightful to the traveller. He mind is fed by the very air. He needs to amusements, company or books except the listory of the place. he has summoned back that the gazes and was communing face to face with phatosophers. poets and emperors, like a magician before his mirror. Pompei and thereal enounseem to my visions, I cannot shake myself and a wake to their reality. My moder refuses to go back so far. Seventeen hundred years.

LEAF FROM A LOG BOOK.

PENSACOLA HARBOUR, April 19, 1834.

*Dear ——; after a passage from Norfolk of 26 days, in which we were forced to go round the southern coast of Cuba, to avoid the Bahama Binks, we have at length anchored in this harbour, and are now moored, by which sailors mean being held by two anchors. I know of no better way to give you an account of myself than by making some extracts from my private journals; so here goes.

April 1 .- At sea nearly a week, and tolay have seen the first sail since we left Norfolk. She was a brig, but at too great a distance to be hailed. The vast solitude was in the waist of the vessel.

April 1.—This morning made Cape Maize, southern coast of Cuba. Imagination cannot conceive a more desolate shore. A little stunted vegetation is all of life that I have seen, for indest no sign of a human habitation. A high and irregular chain of mountains and rocks is the prominent feature of the coast, and there are, here and there, rations, dark and deep enough to sustain the gloominess of the prospect. It is well known that many acts of piracy have been committed near these shores. It seems to me that the arm of justice could never reach a villant who should retreat to these fearful solitudes for concealment.

Witnessed, last night, the phosphorescent appearance of the sea, when the waves dash into foam. It is particularly bright and beau.

The first day I buried myself among the curiosities found in Pompeii. After walking through the chambers and street where they were found. I came to them naturally with were found. I came to them naturally with an interest. I had visited a disentembed city an interest. I had visited a disentembed city an interest. The blood curdled in my

This afternoon the men were exercised at etrating look at the Colonel, and thus requiras it was found cooked upon their tables! I in every respect, as in an action; and though they do not discharge a single cannon, the know what to mention. The catalogue fills snap their locks most valorously. The powder boys are running, as if for powder—the officers sing out for shot. Suddenly, the enemy are supposed to board; the sailors leave the guns, snatch up pikes and cutlasses, and hurry to the point of attack. An order is given to board, and they go armed in the same manner. Two English cruisers passed us while at quarters, and the men appeared to be rushing on the poop, and flourishing their cutlasses in the direction of the English They may have put a wrong constiuction on the circumstance, as John Bull is apt to do, upon the conduct of Americans.

The forecastle is a glorious place to lounge their an evening. The Mids gather there and talk over the enjoyments of land and home, and I often sit there and listen to the songs of the sailors. Their songs are almost always sentimental. It is somewhat strange that, reckless and depraved as many of then are, their songs should so generally partake

April 6th, Sunday .- Sea as smooth as a mili-pond; black fish, porpoises, and sharks swimming about the ship. These last seem to be as hateful in water as snakes upon land; crew were mustered as is usual on the Sabbath. in their clean clothing. This forenoon saw one of the most beautiful sights I ever beheld; there was a dark o ject upon the water at some distance from us which I supposed to be a porpoise or black fish. Taking the glass from the quarter master. I perceived that it was a log drifting over the waves, and a seaguil perched upon it, floating away as comosedly as if upon the wing in his own ele-

'April 9th .- This morning, while moving with a faint breeze over the water, a general restriction. I looked up, and at the distance of about two miles, directly off our starboard to their sick simposes. beam, three water spouts, one of which the oldest sailors declared to be the largest they wandered a day or two ago, and from which most tanguificent; they ascended about half a wis brought the antique chair, were the home mile from the surface of the sea and hung in of Sallust, and docatless had been honoured a curving direction from the clouds. The of Sillast, and doubtiess had been humaned by the visits of Circero, whose villa half ex-water, where they touched it boiled and cavated is near by, and by all the poets, scho-bars and states even of his time. One might

. A night or two since there was a multitude tail and its wings, came and perched upon the main brace.

A vessel is in sight of us and we shall prooably board her. So adieu.'

HARVARD UNIVERSITY.

There are many curious anecdotes of the manners of the past times in the History of this Institution—the oldest College in the Union—by-Mr. Pierce, (late Librarian.) We find it stated, among other things, that at the period of its foundation, 1636, corporal chastisement was a customary mode of discip-line in the great schools of England, and other fluoropean countries, and that it was in-troduced here, and not unfrequently put in practice. There is a Ms. diary of Judge Lowell's extant, in which one instance of the kind is recorded, in 1674, of a student nam ed Sargeant, who was sentenced for blaspheed Sargeant, who was sentenced for blaspie-my to be publicly whipped before all the scholars, sit alone by himself uncovered at meals, &c., and the former part of the sen-tence, adds the Judge, was presently put in execution in the Library before the scholars. The late Dr. Holyoke of Salem, who died at the age of 100, was of the class of 1725, and he used to say that corporal punishment in for a moment, and only for a moment, broken. It was curious to see with what interest all on board gazed at her. Leave the topgallant forecastle, every man of you that don't belong there! had to echo more than once, before the darkness of tarpaulins disappeared
before the darkness of tarpaulins disappeared
be lawful for the President, Tutors, and Probe lawful for the President, Tutors, and Proformed working fair path his feet adventured far,
the prate of peace, the rising grace of war;
the daty firm, in danger calm as even
To friends unchanging and sincere to Heaven.'
To friends unchanging and sincere to Heaven.'

appearance of the sea, when the waves dash into form. It is particularly bright and beautiful when they break against the bow of the superior of the sea seems to be covered with fragments of fire. This light is said to be caused by animatculm.

The sea seems to be covered with fragments of fire. This light is said to be caused by animatculm.

The Indian gave a pension of two paragraphs might lead the infeation of two paragraphs might lead the infeatio general quarters. They are taught to go ed. 'Raymun love fun?' 'Yes,' was the anthrough all the minutiae of an active battle.

The guns are unlashed—the orders are given indian, and hole a glum.' So he rowed a landam, and hole a glum.' So he rowed a landam, and hole a glum.' Indian, and hole a glum.' So he rowed a-long silent and slow, and cut a crotch-stick from a bunch of hazel upon the bank.— Steady now, hole a glum, Raymun,' said he Steady now, hole a glum, Raymun, said he as he clapped the crotch stride the neck of a serpent, that was asleep, close to the edge of a water. Take um now, Raymun; hole fass.? The Colonel then took hold of the stick, keeping the serpent down, while Bigbear tied up a little sack of powder, putting one end of a slow match therein. He then made it fast to the snake's tail, and touching fire to the match, gave orders to slet um go,' at the same time pushing the cance from the shore; the snake being liberated crawled away to his den. The Indian immediately then stood up and clapped his hands, making as loud a noise as possible, and thus roused the serpents, who all in a moment disappeared. Now, look, Raymun. moment disappeared. now look; see fun, said be, and in about a minute the powder exploded, when there was, to be sure, fun alive. The snakes, in thousinds, covered ther icks, all hissing, rattling, twilling, whirling and jumping in every will imaginable! Col Raymond ourst into a boud laugh, that ecoord across the lake, pleased alike with the success of the trick, and the ingenuity of the savage's invention. But Bigue ir, from the beginning to the end, was as grave as a judge, not moving a muscle, and having not the least show of risibility in his countenance. This is truly characteristic of the American aborigines; what causes the greatest excita-bility of laughter in others, has no effect upon them, they remain sober, secate, and fixed as a bro ze statue. They may love fun, but never in the smallest degree exhibit that cha-

> A Boston paper states that the crew of the U.S. Frigate Potomac subscribed $200 whilst on her late voyage, to be expended in the purof Surgical Instruments, to be present-

> The following letter, containing some interesting revolutionary reminiscences, is from the New York Courier and Enquirer. The writer is stated to be a distinguished revolutionary officer, and shows a familiarity with the incidents of that day which is highly at-He is however, mistaken in making so broad an intimation of the neglect with which the memory of Captain Halo has been treated, combined with the sympathy and admiration so profusely expended upon Major Andre. It is ungrateful enough, that he should be seldom spoken of, and so rightly noticed in history, but it is not correct to intimate that 'no American, from patriotic or other motives, has ever written, or beyond the circle of his immediate friends spoken of the untimely fate' of Hale Several accounts have been at offeror times published of his noble conduct and He was one of the earliest marty is to A cerican Liberty; and by unanimous testimony one of the worthfest. A scholar, a solvier, patriot, he volunteered to go into the British camp on Long Island, after the retreat of the Americans to New York, in August 1776, and having obtained an accurate account of its position and force was on his return, when liam Howe, and ordered to immediate execution as a spy The order was executed with extreme rigor; the attendance of a chergyman was refus a; a bible which he asked for to be forwarded to his mother and relations were destroyed. The Court Martial assigned as a reason for this extraordinary outrage that 'reb. is' should not know they had a man ness. Nath in Hale was born at Caventry in Connecticut, and education at Yale Coinge, where he graduated in 1773. His execution took place in the beginning of September 1776. It is to him that Dr. Dwight, who knew him personally, refers in the following lines in the conquest of Canaan, more remarkable his time was getting into disuse. In one in the conquest of Canaan, more remarkable instance, in 1733, a Tutor was prosecuted for the warmth of the panegyric, than their Injustice has been done to the memory of This stock has been unto the memory of this young hero, in comparison with that of Andre, but not to such an extent as stated in the annexed letter. He has been spoken of, and is well known in history. He will be better known as in the process of time the anecdotes of American Revolutionary history are culled, and the finest instances of heroism and public within selections of heroism. and public virtue selected, as enduring traits for the admiration and im tation of posterity.

The dying words of Hale compare advan-ta cousty with those of Andre. They have less of sell, and more of the fervor of the pa-triot. 'Take notice,' said the British Adju-tant General, 'that I die like a brave man.' I only lament,' were the last words of the Connecticut martyr, 'that I have but one life