The special committee to whom was refer-

Also, the bill to incorporate the Baltimore | red so much of the late Executive Message as relates to the southern and western boundaries of this state, have given to the subject that careful examination and attentive consideration its great importance, and the delicate nature of the pending controversy in relation thereto with a sister State, seemed to require, and respectfully beg leave to REPORT.

That although they have been unable to discern any thing in the Executive communication immediately referred to them, or the previous actions of the State of Maryland in relation to this interesting subject, which does not command their entire approbation, or which would indicate the propriety of reviewing in any manner at this time, the merits of the cortroversy, or recommending any relaxation or change in the course deliberately determined upon by the State at the last session of the Legislature; yet anxious to preserve, if possibly within the reach of any means compatible with the honour and just rights of Maryland, that harmony and good understanding heretofore so long and so happily existing between the two States, your Committee have thought it might be conducive to that desirable end and not inconsistent with the duties assigned them, to notice some of the views expressed in the late Message of his Excellency Governor Tazewell to the Legislature of Virginia in reference to this subject; this document is not officially before us, but it has been given to the through the press, and emanating from so high a source, and treating of the very subject your committee are charged to enquire into, with apparent and indeed express regret that circumstances exist, which, in the judgment of his Excellency; preclude Virginia from a direct communication of her views to Maryland, your committee think they might be deemed wanting in their duty, if not in that respect of which Virginia and her functionaries are ever worthy. were they to pass it over in silence. In that document it is declared that the law of Virginia to settle the western limits of that State, and the dividing boundary line between that State 5th of March, 1833, was intended as an accep-tance of our own proposition for the amicable settlement' of the questions existing between us. That the determination of Maryland to seek a decision of her rights by the judicial authority of the Union, was probably occasioned by 'a misapprehension of the terms' of that ennetment of Virginia, which was susceptible of satisfactory explanation, now only withheld, and with regret, because the attitude of Mary. land is regarded as hostile or menacing.

Your committee have been unable to discover any thing in the proceedings of Maryland which could suggest the idea of menace, nor does it seem to be at all applicable to the intimate relations existing between the members of this conthis state, and the controversy on that subject federacy; certainly nothing could be more fosume such an attitude in relation to Virginia, one of her earliest and most glorious allies, not nearer geographically than in consanguinity and affection. Her great strength we know with joy, not envy; and in her glory we have always felt the keen interest of participation.

Maryland had never a hostile feeling towards Virginia; cannot wish to do her violence or wrong, but on the contrary, desires the removal of the only source of disagreement, in order that if possible their union may be more intimate, and established forever on the best and surest foundations.

The southern and western boundaries of Ma. ryland have never been adjusted and defined by compact with Virginia. We hold by charter, a charter which has been fully and solemnly recognised by the State of Virginia, but in the interpretation of that instrument the two States have not been agreed. It is right, even indis. pensible, that the interpretation should be settled, and the limits of the States ascertained. nd our sister State cannot but sometime per ceive that in that settlement her voice (admitted to be equal) is not entitled to preponderating

The State of Maryland seeks or desires noth. ng which is not her's of right, and it is neces. sary for her hononr, that in her controversy, gh amicable, and with her sister, the terms of adjustment shall not be dictated to her.

A hrief review of the proceedings of Mary. land would demonstrate that she has from time to time mildly reminded her sister State of her claims, and sought to refer them to the examination of Commissioners, to be appointed by the parties from among their own citizens respectively; desiring only to provide for the appointment of an umpire by one of our disinterested sirter States, in the event of disagreement among the Commissioners. In such propositions Mary. land has evinced her confidence in the justice of her cause, but has suggested nothing incompati-ble with the dignity of Virginia. She has de-aired and still desires the peaceful ascertainment of her rights, never doubting but Virginia would deem it necessary to her true glory to do right at whatever sacrifice, just that the relative rights of herself and neighbours abould be, equitably or nersell and govern horself accordingly, without reckoning her means of resistance.

The Laws of Virginia, before referred to, of March 5th 1833, has been understood by as as not only not in accordance with, but directly
