"Senor Bardaxi, chief secretary of state. "Senor Vadillo, minister of the interior.
"Senor Salvato, minister of justice.

Senor Pio Pita Pizarro, minister of finances. ·Gen. San Miguel, minister of the marine,

All these, with the exception of Bardai, are members of the Cortes. The London Herald, in allusion to the new ministry, observes "that the nominations of Espartero's colleagues appear to be entirely pro forms, and to keep up the air of a working Cabinet,, for, of the whole list, we cannot select one man who is known either by his talents, knowledge, or energy." This cabinet, as it appears, however, by later dates, does not appear to be completed.

Madrid journals have been received in London to the 21st August. M. Mendisabal was said to be straining every nerve to prevent the com-pletion of the new Ministry. M. Vadillo had positively declared his unwillingness to accept flice, and, as General Espartero very properly observed that his duties as commander-in-chief of the army of operations were incompatible with those of President of the Council, the Queen was said to be at a great loss to find a thought, however, that Espartero would accept the War D-partment, and M. Salvato that of Grace and Justice. The Cortes, it appears, are decidedly hostile to the new Administration. On the other hand, the want of discipline of the army was at its height, and Espartero had los a great deal of his influence over the troops, who ters assigned them in the neighborhood of th

Brigadier Albain had attacked a Carlisi band near Tologo on the 16th and defeated them with a loss of 35 killed and some prisoners.

The Temps, (Paris) represents the situation of affairs in Madrid, as critical in the extreme and, admitting the probability of Espartero's marching against that capital, intimates that the 3,000 men of the Guard, lately ereated for the protection of the Queen would unite with the ar ed citizens to defend it against that General
